

This Jax partnership wants to educate, inspire women across the First Coast

February 22, 2018

Will Robinson

Jacksonville Business Journal

APR Energy, a Jacksonville-based mobile energy supplier, and Generation W, a national nonprofit based in Jacksonville Beach, are teaming up to educate, inspire and connect women across the First Coast.

"We are very proud to join with Generation W as we work together to support this year's events," said John Campion, APR founder and chairman.

APR is a Generation W Foundation partner and will support the nonprofit's efforts, including:

- "Rise & Shine" Signature event – a national event held annually in Jacksonville to discuss relevant issues and to identify actionable steps. This year's event will be Apr. 13.
- Generation WOW – a year-round program encompassing leadership development, community service, clubs, an annual conference and a mentorship program. APR's female leaders will participate in a month-long series.
- Generation WORKS – a day of service in North Florida neighborhoods. APR will participate in several community projects.

"As founder and chairman of APR Energy, I have long recognized the innate value women bring to our company and our clients around the world," said Campion. "In fact, one of our most successful sales directors, Libby Owen, is a shining example of a woman who began her career as an intern with us and through her hard work and commitment, was recognized for her achievements and grew within our ranks.

"It is her talent and determination that recently led our company's efforts to provide power to Puerto Rico in the aftermath of Hurricanes Irma and Maria. And, she's not alone in our company's team of bright and capable women. Joining Generation W allows us to share Libby's story to inspire others."